

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a conveyor belt alignment system comprising pivoting members mounted on a support bracket adaptedly operating through a guide control bar having guide rollers for controlling lateral movements of the belt, the control bar activating the pivoting members through torque arms thereby continuously monitoring the axis of the belt and thereby re-positioning as needed.